UPCOMING IN CAREER & LIFE PLANNING

City Year Information Table

Tuesday, January 20, 11 a.m. – 1 p.m.

Bieberbach-Reed Room, Cornell Campus Center

City Year believes education has the power to help every child reach his or her potential. However, in high-poverty communities there are external factors and obstacles students are faced with every day that can interfere with their ability to both get to school and be ready and able to learn. But it's these students who need a bit of extra, individualized support. But there's a gap between the kind of help they need and the support the schools are designed to provide. City Year partners with most at-risk schools to help bridge the gap between what their students need and what the schools are designed to provide. In doing so, they are helping students reach their full potential and graduate high school in communities all across America.

Are You Ready for Life After Graduation?

Submitted by Mackenzie Thomas, Marketing Assistant of the Center for Career & Life Planning

It's never too early to start to plan for your life after graduation. Where will you go? Where will you work? How do you get there? These are the questions that plague college students everywhere. Career Planning in college is essential for a successful post-grad future. Here at the Center for Career & Life Planning, we help open up the dialogue between students and advisors in order to set these plans in motion. Although our resources and advisors are extensive and beneficial for all Rollins students, featured below is an article that helps college students begin their path toward a successful career path. Listed here are five tips that can help you brainstorm for ways to bulk up your resumes, contact lists, and overall experiences prior to officially entering the career field of your choice.

5 Career Planning Tips for College Students

By Angela Ford

Graduating from college and entering the workforce is a daunting prospect. You've spent years trying to figure out what you actually want to do and making sure your major aligns with your dream job. The workforce for millennials is full of competition. You're up against peers who graduate with you as well as those already experienced in the workplace. There are several ways you can gain an edge before starting the job hunt. Here are five career planning tips for college students which helped me get a jump-start on my career and can help you too.

1. Get some work experience

One of the important determining factors hiring managers take into consideration is previous experience. Any professional work experience will help you skip ahead of other candidates. My work experience began two years before I started college. By the time I graduated I already had six years of work experience to give me an edge, a combination of childcare, retail and administrative. You can present a professional edge by interning and learning as much as possible. Pay attention to what kind of work you enjoy doing and what you don't like to narrow down job possibilities. Even if you don't start out with your dream job there is plenty of time to work, gain knowledge, and find out what you actually like to do.

2. Don't be afraid to try something new or share your ideas

As an entry level employee, you're part of the new workforce, the generation of leaders, entrepreneurs and new business owners. While your goal might not be CEO of a large corporation, you might just have the next idea for a startup or mobile application. We are all unique and bring different ideas to the table and management might not be able to look at a project, job task or solution from every angle. While you might not aim to be president of a large company, learn as much as possible and don't be afraid to share your unique perspective.

3. Network

SOCIAL MEDIA TIPS

20 Best Tips on How to use Instagram for Job Search

Posted on Wisestep by Krishna Reddy

Instagram is an android application that allows its users to build powerful social network in order to gain more sound rewards from it. One such finest reward that you can avail by being an 'Instagram profile owner' is get hired to your favorite job. Whether you are a newbie or an experienced professional, if you are still waiting for your dream job then this is an excellent source to hunt for it.

So, now that you have known about this benefit of Instagram, you will surely wish to create your own profile. But if you want to generate the profile to search for your preferred job then you should follow some great tips that are outlined below. These tips will not only provide you with some more information about the application but will also definitely help you to successfully employ Instagram for your job hunt task!

1. Brand Yourself: Instagram can be used as an excellent personal branding machine. If you have interest in a specific field then you can post your pictures related with similar tasks done by you. For instance, if you want to be a chef then you can post your images with different dishes made by you. If you really want to grab your dream job through Instagram then you should brand yourself effectively and in right direction so that you are successfully able to capture attention of your preferred company.

2. Become a Follower: If there is single or multiple companies that you would like to work for then you need to follow and stay connected with works they are doing. You can even search for company value or non-profit organizations connected to that company and follow their work to show your interest about that entity. Moreover, it is also better to follow specific departments or people within the company. This will not only show your interest but will also help you to develop more sound relations with the employees or departments that you have followed. Twitter, LinkedIn and Facebook are reliable destinations where you can follow professionals of your favorite firm.

3. Utilizing Hashtags: Utilizing Hashtags is one of the most efficient ways to bring notice of your preferred company towards your Instagram account...Read more.

The Earth Institute Columbia University and Columbia School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA)

Now accepting applications

The Earth Institute and the School of International and Public Affairs are now accepting applications for a Master of Public Administration (MPA) program in Environmental Science and Policy at Columbia University. The application deadlines for the one-year MPA in Environmental Science and Policy program are approaching: January 15 (fellowships consideration) and February 15 (final deadline). All applicants who apply by January 15, 2015 will be eligible for the Dean's Fellowship – a full-tuition grant and internship – as well as for numerous partial fellowships. Our program stands apart in its one-year structure, which makes for an intensive learning experience that saves students both time and money, and allows graduates to re-enter the workforce better prepared to meet the increasing demands on leaders. In this video, a few of our 700 alumni speak about the program's transformative power on their sustainability careers. For any questions please contact Sarah Tweedie at st2745@columbia.edu.

Southern Teachers Agency

Now accepting applications

The Southern Teachers Agency is offering teaching positions for all majors. Schools have started recruiting teachers, coaches, and administrators for 2015-16. It's not too late to become an STA candidate and be included in the upcoming season of Recruitment Fairs:

- Math Masters (Virtual Fair for Math teachers) Thursday, January 29
- Science Stars (Virtual Fair for Science Teachers) Thursday, February 5
- Charlottesville Teachers Fair (interviews in person) Saturday, February 14
- Texas Roundup (Virtual Fair for schools in Texas) Thursday, March 12
- Florida's Finest (Virtual Fair for schools in Florida) Thursday, March 19
- Best of the South, Atlanta (interviews in person) Saturday, March 28
- Season Finale (Virtual Fair for all teachers, schools in all states) Thursday, April 23

STA helps nearly 600 private and independent schools in the Mid-Atlantic and Southern states hire enthusiastic learners, communicators, and role models for their classrooms, playing fields, service activities, and co-curricular programs. These schools offer small classes, supportive and collegial faculty cultures, opportunities to innovate, create, and inspire. And when they hire faculty, they focus on subject area expertise—proven success in the study of mathematics, foreign language, or biology, for example. Though helpful, an education major/degree is not a hiring prerequisite. STA's services are personal, proven, and free for candidates.

Click here to apply. Because they interview all of their candidates, it can take several weeks to become an active STA candidate. So start your application today!
