Little Big Econ State Forest
Size: 9,563 Acres
Ecological Preserve
Seminole County, FL
Located on Flagler Trail

Today the large ecological preserve of the Little Big Econ State Forest is known as a premier spot in Central Florida for wildlife sighting and a relaxing cruise down the Econlockhatchee River. This space is managed by the St. Johns River Water Management District.

Historically the Little Big Econ Forest provided among the first ways of crossing the Econlockhatchee. The legendary Flagler railroad network ran through the area and has been converted in part to become an integral part of the Florida National Scenic trail.

Roughly 100 miles of river cut through the forest. This important ecosystem is home to many Florida species including: the gray fox, river otters, white tailed deer, wild turkeys, bobcats, and numerous migrating birds.
